Left Field NYC x Cowboy Crust Debut Persimmon-Dyed "Cowboy Cut" Selvedge Denim

A Fusion of Vintage Workwear, Western Grit, and Natural Dye Tradition

Left Field NYC, the cult-favorite heritage workwear brand, has teamed up with Cowboy Crust to introduce a bold, limited-edition Kakishibu (persimmon-dyed) "Cowboy Cut" selvedge denim. This collaboration blends 1930's cuts, rugged Western aesthetics, and traditional Japanese dyeing techniques, resulting in a one-of-a-kind pair of jeans that honors craftsmanship, sustainability, and timeless style.

Vintage Denim Gets A Modern Remake

Drawing inspiration from 1930-1940's denim, this release features a high-rise, straight, wide-leg, buckle back "cowboy cut" designed for durability and comfort. The fabric—a premium 15.5oz Japanese selvedge denim—has been hand-dyed with natural persimmon tannins, lending a rich, clay red weft that fades beautifully over time.

"The ultimate goal in any clothing item I buy or sew myself is to find the balance of style and durable functionality," says Crust Young, designer of the "Cowboy Cut" denim. "We wanted to pay homage to the fit of denim from the 30's while trying to avoid making a straight-up reproduction. There are a few fun nods to the past while also feeling modern enough that anyone can enjoy wearing them, working in them, and living in them."

Limited Release & Availability

The Left Field NYC x Cowboy Crust “Cowboy Cut” denim was available in extremely limited quantities (150) through a capped pre-order that sold out in days. A release of the remaining pairs will occur on Saturday, February 22nd at Left Field NYC’s Los Angeles store. Each pair is individually numbered, emphasizing the small-batch nature of this special release.
